The Character of Romeo

Form of Romeo and Juliet: Love and Hate

Love and hate in the play Romeo and Juliet are the two main forces that drive the plot. Love is the force that brings Romeo and Juliet together, while hate is the force that drives their families apart. The play is a tragedy because of the way that love and hate are intertwined. Romeo and Juliet's love is pure and selfless, but it is also doomed from the start because of the hatred between their families. The play shows how love can overcome hate, but it also shows how hate can destroy love. In the end, Romeo and Juliet's love is the only thing that saves them from a life of hate and violence.
